

The Intergenerational Storytelling Prompt Sheet

Structured Communication Protocols for Shared Activities

This structured index provides a non-verbal bridge to close the communication gap during sensory task engagement. Questions are strictly categorized under the "People, Places, and Things" framework to establish distinct factual scaffolding.

1. The People Framework (Preserving Identity)

- Who was the most reliable person you knew during your early childhood years?
- What vocational duties did your grandparents execute within their communities?
- How did you and your lifelong partner navigate early household decisions?
- What specific values did your parents enforce during your formative years?
- Who was your closest childhood companion, and what structural games did you play?
- What specific character trait do you recognize across multiple generations of our family?
- Can you describe the physical voice or signature laughter of your favorite aunt or uncle?

2. The Places Framework (Anchoring Environments)

- What architectural attributes defined the layout of your childhood kitchen?
- Where did your family group gather during severe weather events or winter seasons?
- What tree varieties or agricultural landscapes bordered your primary neighborhood?
- How did the neighborhood layout change from your youth into early adulthood?
- What physical structures or local retail anchors did you frequent on weekends?
- Can you reconstruct the spatial sequence of walking from the front door to your bedroom?
- What environmental scents or sounds characterized your favorite outdoor location?

3. The Things Framework (Triggering Milestone Objects)

- What mechanical features or color profile defined your first personal automobile?
- What specific tools or workspace assets did you use during your multi-decade career?
- Which specific childhood toy or physical asset did you preserve the longest?
- What design attributes characterized the standard attire or uniform of your youth?
- What structural heirlooms or furniture assets have been passed down through your line?
- What mechanical instrument or appliance changed household operations during your youth?
